AFPM President & CEO Chet Thompson was a guest on a recent broadcast of “The Labor & Energy Show”, which airs up and down the Mid-Atlantic coast.

Also joining as guests this episode were Kathleen Sgamma, president of the Western Energy Alliance, and David Callahan, president of the Marcellus Shale Coalition, who both spoke to the work of their respective associations and the upstream oil and gas industries writ large in supporting U.S. energy security and leadership.

During the broadcast, Thompson emphasized the pride that the fuel refining and petrochemical industry employees take in their work and how building a more competitive, sustainable future and policy environment is “only going to happen when we get our three million plus workforce, all of ours—Kathleen’s, Dave’s, mine—all talking. They’re the ones on the front lines, like you say. They’re the ones we need out there advocating for our industries and our facilities.”

About AFPM:

The American Fuel & Petrochemical Manufacturers (AFPM) is the leading trade association representing the makers of the fuels that keep us moving, the petrochemicals that are the essential building blocks for modern life, and the midstream companies that get our feedstocks and products where they need to go. We make the products that make life better, safer and more sustainable — we make progress.
